The beach can get a bit crowded in high season, but if you walk further to the south, you'll find yourself completely alone. There is a small lodging path through the green jungle, where once was an elephant training camp, but nowadays all you'll find is a secluded beach. The water is deep enough to swim and it is not affected by tides. There are some rocks and corals so do take care while going into the water. Kala Patthar offers couple of umbrellas and wooden chairs. There is also a small picnic area with trash bins set in the shade of the trees. In season locals sell fresh coconuts and mango juices. Kala Patthar is the crowning jewel of Havelock, a refreshing haven for nature admirers, and an ideal site for weary travellers looking for an ease for their exhausted soul. For those of you who wish to leave the world behind and set out on a journey of self-discovery, Kala Patthar will feel like nothing short of home.

Around the peak seasons, tourists in large numbers make day tours in Baratang Island and visit the caves making it more crowded during those seasons.
As previously mentioned, the mud volcanoes can only be found in Baratang Island across India. Active mud volcanoes are located around 4 km from the Nilambur Jetty, where the visitors can experience these bubbling piles of mud formed due to the emission of natural gasses from underground.
